STRIKER ISN'T REPENTANT FROM SAME MAN

Marine Smith Says Gunboat Life Was Hard.

MUTINY WAS NOT INTENDED

BUT COURT-MARTIAL INTERPRETED IT AS SUCH.

Smith and His Companions Were Given Heavy Sentences, but Former Was Released on Account of Sickness.

James M. Smith, who is in St. Louis, on his way to his home in Philadelphia, is convinced that the strike is not a satisfactory remedy for the grievances of United States soldiers.

With twelve comrades, all United States marines, Smith took part in a strike on the gunboat Manila, one year ago. Their grievance was that double duty was required of them.

The army authorities, who reviewed the case in court-martial, found another name for the strike.

They called it mutiny, and the thirteen men were given sentences ranging in length from one year to two years.

Smith, who was pardoned after serving eleven months of his two years' term, was the first of the men to be released.

Smith expresses neither regret for his offense nor dissatisfaction with his punishment.

"No man could stand the work we were required to do," he declared. "At the same time, the discipline of the marine corps has to be kept up, and when the force of men became short through sickness, they had to put us on double duty."

"We had no intention of being mutinous," said Smith. "We simply tried to get our duties made lighter."

"We were transferred to be on guard on alternate hours every other day. The second day, instead of having a chance to sleep, we were working on the gunboat."

"During guard duty we were required to be on duty every other hour through the night. This left an opportunity for sleep only in the odd hours, and it is impossible to get refreshing sleep in the periods of only an hour."

"On the next day we were kept at work so steadily that there was no chance for more than eight or nine hours' sleep out of the 24. The third day came the shifts of guard duty every other hour. Sunday was like any other day."

"The boys stood it a few weeks. Then 13 of us refused to serve under such conditions any longer."

"It was something of a surprise when we were locked up on charges of mutiny. The severity of the sentence was still more of a surprise."

"We were sent to the prison at Camp P. J. and transferred later to Mare Island. The boat on which the mutiny occurred was formerly a member of the Spanish navy, and was captured by Admiral Dewey's squadron."

Smith, who is still weak from his illness, is endeavoring to reach his mother in Philadelphia. She is Mrs. Jennie L. Smith, at his pay, $24, was confiscated under the court-martial sentence he is in there. He carries with him a certified copy of the decree under which he was imprisoned.

WOMAN PREACHED AT "BAD JACK'S" SALOON

Mrs. Mary McGee Hall, Who Conducted Religious Services in the Saloon Owned by "Bad Jack" Williams and William Condon, Friday Night.

Post-Dispatch Woman Gives Her Impression of Unique Services Conducted by Mrs. Mary McGee Hall Friday Night Amid Unusual Surroundings.

BY ROSE MARION.

Last night I spent an hour in a beer garden. It was not one of those quiet, well-kept places, where good citizens and their wives and families gather to spend the evening.

It was "Bad Jack" Williams' garden at Nineteenth and Chestnut streets. During the time I was there I saw nothing but the most excellent conduct, I heard nothing but the best language and I saw not even the slightest drop of beer.

There was a reason for this, of course. Friday evening was the time set for Mrs. Mary McGee Hall, follower of Alexander Dowrie, to deliver a sermon within the confines of what is popularly considered one of the worst places of its kind in St. Louis.

Mrs. Hall was there by invitation of the manager and the priest, and she had been given to her by him before the crowd. Mrs. Hall was there before I reached there and so was the crowd. Just before I reached the entrance I wished that I had listened to the advice of my friends and stayed at home. It seemed such a rash and unwomanly act, going to this place.

I remembered with horror all the things I had heard about this place and wondered what possessed me to want to come. I was in excellent care, however, so I gripped my teeth and resolved to see the thing through.

"Here's the place," said my escort, pointing to a pair of swinging doors, back of which were brilliant lights. "Do we have to go through the saloon?" I asked.

"O, no! We don't go through that way. We go the way of the toughs, through this entrance," pointing to a large pair of doors farther down Chestnut street. In a tripartite doorway there and I had stepped from the street into the beer garden.

It was my first beer garden. Consequently, it was with much curiosity that I gazed around the place. Of course, I was disappointed. I came to see a beer garden. As I said before, there was no beer visible, and the garden was not a garden. It was a hall with a wooden floor and a wooden ceiling.

The pictures were of the style of art you might expect there-and yet they weren't bad. The brewery signs-well, they are such ordinary sights to St. Louisans that I didn't do more than glance at them.

BABY TORN FROM MOTHER'S ARMS

St. Louis County Officers Obey a Court's Behest.

ENTERED HOME AT MIDNIGHT

MRS. COURTNEY, NEIGHBORS ALLEGED, ABUSED HER CHILD.

Maplewood Was Excited Over the Allegations and the Unusual Midnight Scene Aroused the Pretty Suburb.

Following a determined struggle with the child's mother, Deputy Sheriff Bellairs and Belleville, acting under orders from Probate Judge Wurdemann of St. Louis County, secured possession Friday at midnight of Cadey Courtney, the baby daughter of Mrs. George Courtney of Maplewood.

The incident created intense commotion throughout the pretty suburb and hundreds were attracted to the Courtney home. Numerous affidavits were filed in the county court a few days ago to the effect that Mrs. Courtney was not a fit person to care for her baby. It was alleged that on various occasions she had whipped the child severely, and, in one instance, had left the little one on the doorstep all night.

At another time, it was alleged, she refused to give the child anything to eat. Judge Wurdemann immediately issued an order to have the child brought into court and said that if the charges could be substantiated he would appoint a guardian. The deputies proceeded to Mrs. Courtney's home, and it was reported there that she had gone to Fairview, Ill.

Among those who interested themselves in the case was Mrs. Mary V. Calkins, president of the Children's Golden Chain Humane Society, who lives in Ellendale, adjoining Maplewood. Her husband, Fred Calkins, was on his way home about 8 o'clock Friday night when he noticed Mrs. Courtney with her baby on the car.

When she arrived at the station, the promptly notified the county sheriff and the deputy sheriffs hastened to Maplewood. Mrs. Courtney was waiting for them in the garage, and she was not at all sorry to see them.

Accompanying them were Justice of the Peace Eugene Hansmann, Mrs. Mary Calkins and Mrs. Calkins. Mrs. Courtney seated them in the parlor, where the writ, issued by Judge Wurdemann, was read.

"I suppose," said Deputy Sheriff Bellairs, "you will not object to our taking the child?" Mrs. Courtney's eyes flamed with anger. "You shall have the child," she declared.

The child was lying on the bed, fast asleep. Mrs. Courtney grabbed it in her arms and defied the officers to take the little one from her.

Finding argument was of no avail, the officers used force. Mrs. Courtney screamed. "You are robbing me of my child," she exclaimed.

From the house the deputies hurried with the child, followed by the rest of the party and a score of neighbors who threatened to do all manner of things if they did not let her have her baby.

Little Cadey was turned over temporarily to Mrs. Calkins and passed the night at the latter's home. She will be taken into court one day next week.

Mrs. Courtney is about 35 years of age. She declares that she is a victim of persecution. Recently she was convicted before Justice Hansmann of discharging firearms and was fined $25. A few days after this she was summoned into court to give a peace bond.

Mrs. Bonner of 4233 Gano avenue, who told the county authorities she is well acquainted with Mrs. Courtney, volunteered to adopt the little one. But Mrs. Courtney refused to give up.

Mrs. Courtney has been a resident of Maplewood about a year. She has mingled little with the neighbors. Formerly she lived in South St. Louis. Her husband is employed at the Nidderhagen mills in Granite City.

TEN SECONDS WITH THE POET OF THE WANTS

Two men sat down, one summery day,
To rest in an olive street cafe.
And one was lean and an old door-mat.
Though his pocketbook was large and fat.
On the hind and the bot, as he liked to call it,
Though his purse was nowhere 'round at all.
The lean man ordered a bird and a bot,
And the round man ordered a glass of wat.
Though the lean one, with a dyspeptic sigh,
Declared that he couldn't eat it he'd try.
But the jolly round youngster glued his lips
To the bird and the bot, and he said, "I'll try."
"The world's awry," he said to himself,
"I've got the appetite, he the pelf."
"And I'd swap him my appetite, great Scott!
For a bite of the bird and a swig of the bot!"

POSTMASTER PRINTS NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES PRESSOR WRECK

HAD BEEN OFFICIALLY CALLED TO ACCOUNT FOR DELAY.

THEN PROCEEDED TO GET EVEN

He Sent the Department a Hefty Sack in Which There Were $100 Pennies.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Owing to the unaccountable delay in remitting the postal authorities a few days ago asked John W. Boney, postmaster at Elizabeth, Ind., for a settlement. Today the postmaster-general received both money and an explanation. The money was in a stout canvas sack which came by express. Acting Postmaster-General Johnson "hefted" the sack. It was about all he cared to lift.

In it he found only pennies. Mr. Boney wrote that there were 300 of them. The amount due. He explained that he had not sent them sooner because it would cost the government just as much to have 300 transported as 300, or 30,000, as the express company. Subsequently he sent for the exact weight of 300.

Mr. Johnson will turn the pennies over to the third assistant postmaster-general. The official will give them to the postmaster to deliver to someone in the treasury department. After many yards of red tape, leave unwound, the pennies will get to Treasurer Roberts. Then Postmaster Boney will receive receipt and likely a reprimand from the department for employing such an unusual method of settling his account.
